The History of Motorcycles

The history of the motorcycle begins in the second half of the 19th century. Motorcycles are descended from the "safety bicycle", a bicycle with front and rear wheels of the same size and a pedal crank mechanism to drive the rear wheel. A motorcycle was often called a bike, motorbike, or cycle which was a two or three-wheeled motor vehicle.

Historical Flashback of the Motorcycle

- 1920 — Gottlieb Daimler built a motorcycle to test engines and that was the reason for the birth of the motorcycle. In the next century there has been rapid progress in design, strength and performance.
- 1930 — During the Great Depression, the target changed and motorcycles were developed more in terms of appearance, performance and became affordable to citizens.
- 1940 — As the world was in war, the development of motorcycles was interrupted.
- 1950 — While cars were still a luxury, simple two-wheeled motorcycles were still the obvious choice and the scooters were on the rise.
- 1960 — The rise of the car hit hard the motorcycle industry and new markets included scooters.
- 1970 — Motorcycle models for off-road have been released for adventure enthusiasts in the USA.
- 1980 — Motorcycles were renewed and interest in classic motorcycles also influenced the design of the new models. Motorcycles became more racing and fully equipped.
- 1990 — Elegant and economic scooters have won a new generation of fans due to the increase of price in fuel and congestion.
- 2000 — Motorcycle riders in the new millennium are rewarded with excellent technological advancement, luxury and comfort.
